You can download the paper by clicking the button above. The third step is to use the cost formulaY = a + bX to estimate the total manufacturing overhead cost (the numerator) for the coming period. Conversely, all nonmanufacturing costs are treated as period costs and they are not assigned to units of product.2-3 Normal costing systems applyoverhead costs to jobs by multiplying a predetermined overhead rate by the actual amountof the allocation incurred by the job.2-4 Unit product cost is computedby taking the total manufacturing costs assigned to a job and dividingit by the number of units containedin the job.2-5 The first step is to estimate the total amount of the allocation base (the denominator) that will berequired for next periodcAAAs estimatedlevel of production. These costs include direct materials costs tracedto the job, direct labor costs traced to the job, and manufacturing overhead costs applied to the job. If the company computes actual overhead rates more frequently to get around this problem, the rates may fluctuate widely due to seasonal factors or variations in output. If these costs are to be assigned to products, they mustbe allocated to the products.2-8 If actual manufacturing overhead cost is applied to jobs, the company must wait until the end of the accounting period to apply overhead and to cost jobs. The second step is to estimate the total fixed manufacturing overhead cost for the coming period and the variable manufacturing overhead cost per unit of the allocation base. In addition, some production costs such as indirect materials cannot be easily traced to jobs. Become Premium to read the whole document. When a job is completed, the job cost sheet is used to compute the unit product cost.2-7 Some production costs such as a factory managercAAAs salary cannot be traced to a particular product or job, but rather are incurred as a result of overall production activities.
